Progress on inclusive data priorities

No	Question	Guidance	Champion response
1.1	What progress have you made on your Inclusive data priorities/ IDC Action Plan priorities in the past year?	Include examples to accompany any highlights or achievements.	Progress has continued in streamlining data disaggregation within IMPACT's core analytical outputs, such as the MSNI bulletin related to multisectoral research. Disaggregation by several demographic criteria, some core, others optional, has now been made mandatory. An in-depth review of the quality and use of perception data related to self-reported priorities and preferences was carried out through the implementation of the HESPER approach in seven countries since its launch, accompanied by the publication of several technical guidance notes. In parallel, progress has been made in developing complementary research focusing on marginalized groups, such as people living with

			disabilities. A comprehensive review of the use of the Washington Group Short Set of Questions across IMPACT's assessments was conducted to enable more robust disability-specific disaggregation. Several advocacy briefs were also published, providing insights and technical feedback on collecting data on the needs of people with disabilities in humanitarian contexts, while also fostering broader reflections on how to better integrate gender dynamics into key stages of the research cycle, including tool design and sampling strategies.
1.2	What areas of your Inclusive data priorities/ IDC Action Plan have you made the least progress on, in the past year?	Include any challenges or barriers faced.	As mentioned last year, progress is still needed on piloting an individual-level assessment approach and its associated intersectional analytical framework to identify individual drivers of vulnerability. This shift requires a methodological transition from household- to individual-level surveys, which must be carefully implemented to maintain coherence with broader research and policy objectives. Piloting such approaches also necessitates additional funding to support research and development and to generate evidence from pilot initiatives. In parallel, further reflection is needed to better capture intra-household dynamics, such as gender and power relations, that shape how households identify and prioritize their main challenges and needs. Similarly, additional efforts are required to understand the specific needs and challenges experienced by children from their own perspective. Dedicated resources and capacities would be necessary to explore how adopting a child-centred approach to needs analysis in humanitarian settings could provide added value for key partners within the sector.

1.3	Have there been any changes to your Inclusive data priorities/ IDC Action Plan objectives in the last year?	(Yes, No) If yes, please give details of any changes	No

2.1	In the last 12 months, have you engaged in any advocacy around the IDC, like encouraging other organizations to join or speaking about the IDC at events?	(Yes, No) If yes, please give details, including any examples	No
2.2	In the last 12 months, has being part of the IDC enabled you to collaborate with other Champions or partners to take forward your inclusive data priorities?	(Yes, No) If yes, please give details, including any examples.	Yes. While we are still in the process of reconnecting with the IDC, recent invitations to webinars and quarterly meetings have allowed our staff to better understand how various actors are implementing different approaches to more inclusive data. These exchanges have sparked internal reflections and discussions on how to further improve our own processes.
2.3	In the last 12 months, have you shared practice and learning with other countries/organizations on the actions you are taking on inclusive data?	(Yes, No) If yes, please give details, including examples.	Yes. Participation in the Disability / Gender Advisory Groups, discussion with UNICEF on the use of Washington Groups indicators, as well as statistical analysis on children on the move with IDAC. Ressources sharing with the Pride Center on how to conduct needs assessments with SOGIESC communities in humanitarian crises.

3.1	What are your priorities for your IDC action plan / inclusive data work in the next 12 months?		Supporting the development of guidance and tools for researching marginalised groups in humanitarian contexts, advocating for an increased number of research cycles to include individual-level sampling approaches, and continuing to explore improved ways to assess and monitor self-perceived needs across crises remain key priorities.
