Progress on inclusive data priorities
No	Question	Guidance	Champion response
1.1	What progress have you made on your Inclusive data priorities/ IDC Action Plan priorities in the past year?	Include examples to accompany any highlights or achievements.	In the past year, Data2X has made significant progress in advancing our Inclusive Data priorities and the objectives of the IDC Action Plan, focusing on improving the availability, quality, and use of gender data. Through the Gender Data Network (GDN), we expanded collaboration with gender data statisticians from 53 countries across Africa and Asia, facilitating knowledge-sharing on innovative methodologies and enhancing national statistical capacities. Additionally, we strengthened efforts to close the $450M annual gender data financing gap by publishing research briefs on official development assistance and domestic resources for gender data systems and

			advocating for increased investment from donors, governments, and private sectors. Our work also prioritized intersectional data initiatives, developing case studies that highlight how gender intersects with other identity markers like income, disability, and SOGIESC. We piloted tools to improve inclusivity in data collection, such as integrating citizen-generated data and administrative systems. To drive the demand for gender data, we showcased its transformative impact on policies in areas like women's financial inclusion and health outcomes and launched the Gender Data Leader Awards to celebrate policy champions. These efforts, coupled with advancing data usability and hosting panels at the UN World Data Forum, underscore our commitment to ensuring inclusive data informs impactful policies that leave no one behind.
1.2	What areas of your Inclusive data priorities/ IDC Action Plan have you made the least progress on, in the past year?	Include any challenges or barriers faced.	One area where we have made the least progress on our Inclusive Data priorities and IDC Action Plan is securing adequate financing for gender data systems in the general ecosystem. While there have been some advances in funding for data and statistics broadly, grants specific to gender data have remained stagnant. This flat funding trajectory limits the ability to scale initiatives, develop innovative tools, and implement sustainable solutions to close gender data gaps. Additionally, forward-looking financial commitments for gender data are lower, indicating a lack of momentum to increase investment in this critical area.

			Persistent barriers to advancing gender data financing include limited coordination among funders, a predominant focus on project- based investments rather than long-term systems strengthening, and a disconnect between funding for gender data and broader gender equality initiatives. While philanthropic contributions, such as those from the Gates Foundation, remain significant, over-reliance on external funding highlights the need for more sustainable domestic financing strategies. Additionally, challenges in effectively tracking and tagging funding allocations for gender data continue to hinder advocacy and resource mobilization efforts. Addressing these issues will require innovative financing approaches, stronger collaboration among stakeholders, and better integration of gender data financing into comprehensive development agendas.
